An outdoor landscape of Rood Bridge Park by Tualatin artist Anna Lancaster has been chosen for the city of Hillsboro's Public Art Collection.

Hillsboro Mayor Jerry Willey announced the 2015 selection from an entry pool of 47 artworks. An earlier artists' call from the city asked for two-dimensional pieces that "represent the characteristic landscape, city view, people and places of Hillsboro."

Lancaster created the oil painting at the city's Plein Air competition, an outdoor painting contest giving artists a designated amount of time to finish their work.

The original, "Rood Bridge Park with Mid Century Modern Style," will be exhibited at the Civic Center auditorium in downtown Hillsboro. Willey will give limited edition, archive-quality prints to dignitaries and business leaders visiting Hillsboro.
